The Story of the Cemetery

The Land:

The Third Creek Presbyterian Church Cemetery is comprised of several plats of land obtained from 1792-1887. Originally, all of the existing Third Creek property was Samuel Young land. All of it was handed down by Samuel Young, his children, or his grandchildren: the Woods, Irvine, Webb and Johnson families. The first deed for the property [Samuel Young to Third Creek Congregation...of the Presbyterian Faith, Rowan County Deed Book 16:640-641, May 4, 1792] mentions an existing graveyard, a meeting house and a session house already on the tract. It measured 13 poles square [later plats show it as 14, 15 and finally 15.3 poles square {or 252.5 feet square}]. This tract adjoined the original homeplaces of Samuel Young on the south and west sides and William Armstrong, deceased, on the north side. This church's first tract is marked on the enclosed map. Prior to the one acre gift in 1792, nine of the twelve known burial sites were in the center of the tract around the old log meeting house [see shaded sites on map].

In 1817 the first land addition was made to the immediate north side of the original cemetery by Caleb Webb, II. His wife and brother are buried in the cemetery, but his burial site is unknown. This addition would have included graves that were outside the original tract, but south of the access driveway. In 1825 Samuel Young, Jr. donated 2.5 acres on the south and east sides of the old cemetery. His burial site is also unknown. This land addition opened the way for the construction of the new, brick sanctuary in 1833-1835. By 1830 the congregation was growing and the cemetery was filling in, obviously with many spaces that are unmarked today.

In 1834 William B. Wood [who married a Young] sold the church a tract of land on the east side and one on the northwest side of the cemetery. In 1841 the area west and south of the old graveyard was purchased from John Irvine, Jr. [grandson of Samuel Young] adding another 3.75 acres to church land. This became the former 'new section' of the cemetery and much of the land across the street. It also included the spring in the woods that had been guaranteed for church use in 1792.

A few years later in 1846 John W. & Eliza Webb Johnson added another 2.5 acres on the north side of the church property, which ultimately enclosed the present 'new' section of the cemetery. He did not become a member of the church until two years later. She joined the church in 1837, but both of them have unknown locations for their remains. The final acquisition occurred in 1887 from Joseph C. & M.K. Irvine on the north side for another 3 acres. They later moved to Fourth Creek Presbyterian Church [now, Statesville First P.C.]. This gave Third Creek a total of 18.151 acres, all donated or sold minimally from 1792-1887. The only other acquisitions were house lots in Elmwood, and two in Cleveland.

Cemetery Expansion:

In a survey conducted from known stones and the original deed and plat coordinates, the original cemetery grew from the twelve old burial sites around the old log meeting house, to an area that included rows 3:10-29:4 to [a line drawn from] 3:52-25:55, to the end of row 29. As time progressed, the cemetery expanded in this order: row 2 was opened for burials in the 1830s. By 1860, disease and death during the Civil War increased the burial rate and spaces 1-10 of rows 3-29 were then used for burials. In 1870 the former 'new' section (outside the old stone wall, rows 30-47) was opened because the old cemetery was filling up.

While it may seem that there are hundreds of empty spaces in the old cemetery today, it is probable that they contain the graves of unmarked, unknown individuals. The people of old knew about the situation and knew that expansion was a necessity. The fact that a stone does not mark a spot does not mean that it is an empty spot. Also, the stones were slightly (?) moved or adjusted to align the rows at two different times in the past.

The present 'new' or additional section, separated by an access road was opened about 1900, and finally, row 1 was opened in the 1920's. New measures will need to be taken in the future to assure sufficient space for burials.

Special Features:

The original tract of 1792 mentions the existance of a cemetery, a log meeting house and a session house. The site of the log house includes obvious unmarked graves, which makes it difficult to define the exact location of the log meeting house. The fact that the present session house is outside of the old one acre tract may indicate that it was either moved or a second one [the present one] was built later, about 1835.

Tradition indicates the possibility of a 'pulpit' [preaching stand-?] on the immediate south side of Rev. Kilpatrick's grave on row 15, stone 12. He requested that his remains be buried on the north side of the pulpit [d. 1829], but it is unknown to what pulpit he refers. He came to Third Creek about 1790, so it could be either the old Thomason preaching stand, an earlier [1764] schoolhouse with a pulpit/lectern, or the newer log meeting house northwest of the Ney tomb. The session house and log meeting house were not on the south side of his grave, so it is speculated that he referred to the old preaching stand/pulpit where he first started preaching in 1790. The plots in rows 13-16, spaces 1-10 were not used prior to Kilpatrick's death, so the preaching stand could have been there, south of his grave. The speculated area is about 40'x45' and is marked on the map.

Instructions for Reading this index:

The Index is comprised of four sections, separated by dividers:

1) The Master Index 2) The Alphabetical Index 3) The Birthdate Index 4) The Deathdate Index.

It is important to read these instructions before reading the index. In that manner, the symbols, codes and letter-styles will be understood. The following sample illustrates the use of many of these.

The latter three indexes only include information on known people. Empty and unmarked plots are not included, nor are the lines that contain additional information. The Master Index must be referenced for this information. The book begins with the Master Index. The following illustrations gives an example of the format used:

ALL veterans are indicated with rank and some additional information.

Information with no notes indicates the exact description of the stone. A description of the notes of each section is indicated below:

| Row | The Row number of the stone's location. The rows are 1-47 and A-F. An additional row Z for known burials in unknown locations is also given. Row 10½ was added during the survey of the cemetery. A blank line indicates that an editorial comment or epitaph are given. |
| Number | The number of the stone OR plot in the row. A lower-case letter [a] indicates that a secondary entry, usually for a child, is made on the stone. An upper-case letter [A] indicates an addition to the row after the plots were numbered. A blank line indicates that a epitaph or editorial comment is given. |
| Full Name | The name of the person is listed from the stone. A single asterisk [] after the family name indicates that it is found somewhere else on the stone. An asterisk [] by all names on the stone indicates that an individual is speculated as being there in that family section, either by an initiated stone, or some circumstance. When an initial is given, the full name is expanded within brackets []. When another full name is known, or a maiden name is known, it is added in brackets []. The bold Unknown indicates that a burial is there with unknown information. This part of the survey is not completed. All known military personnel will have their highest rank indicated in upper-case brackets { }. |
| Birth | The date of birth given on the stone. A ? indicates it is unknown. A birthdate followed by an asterisk indicates the date is deduced from the age indicated on the stone. Double asterisks indicate the date is referenced and not on the stone. A year followed by /00/00 indicates the month and date are unknown. |
| Death | The date of death given on the stone. A ? indicates it is unknown. An X indicates that a date does not exist. A deathdate followed by a double or triple asterisk indicates the date is deduced from another source. A year followed by /00/00 indicates the month and date are unknown. Those who died or were killed in action will have dates in Bold Italics at 12 pt. |

Tombstone Markings and Editorial Notes

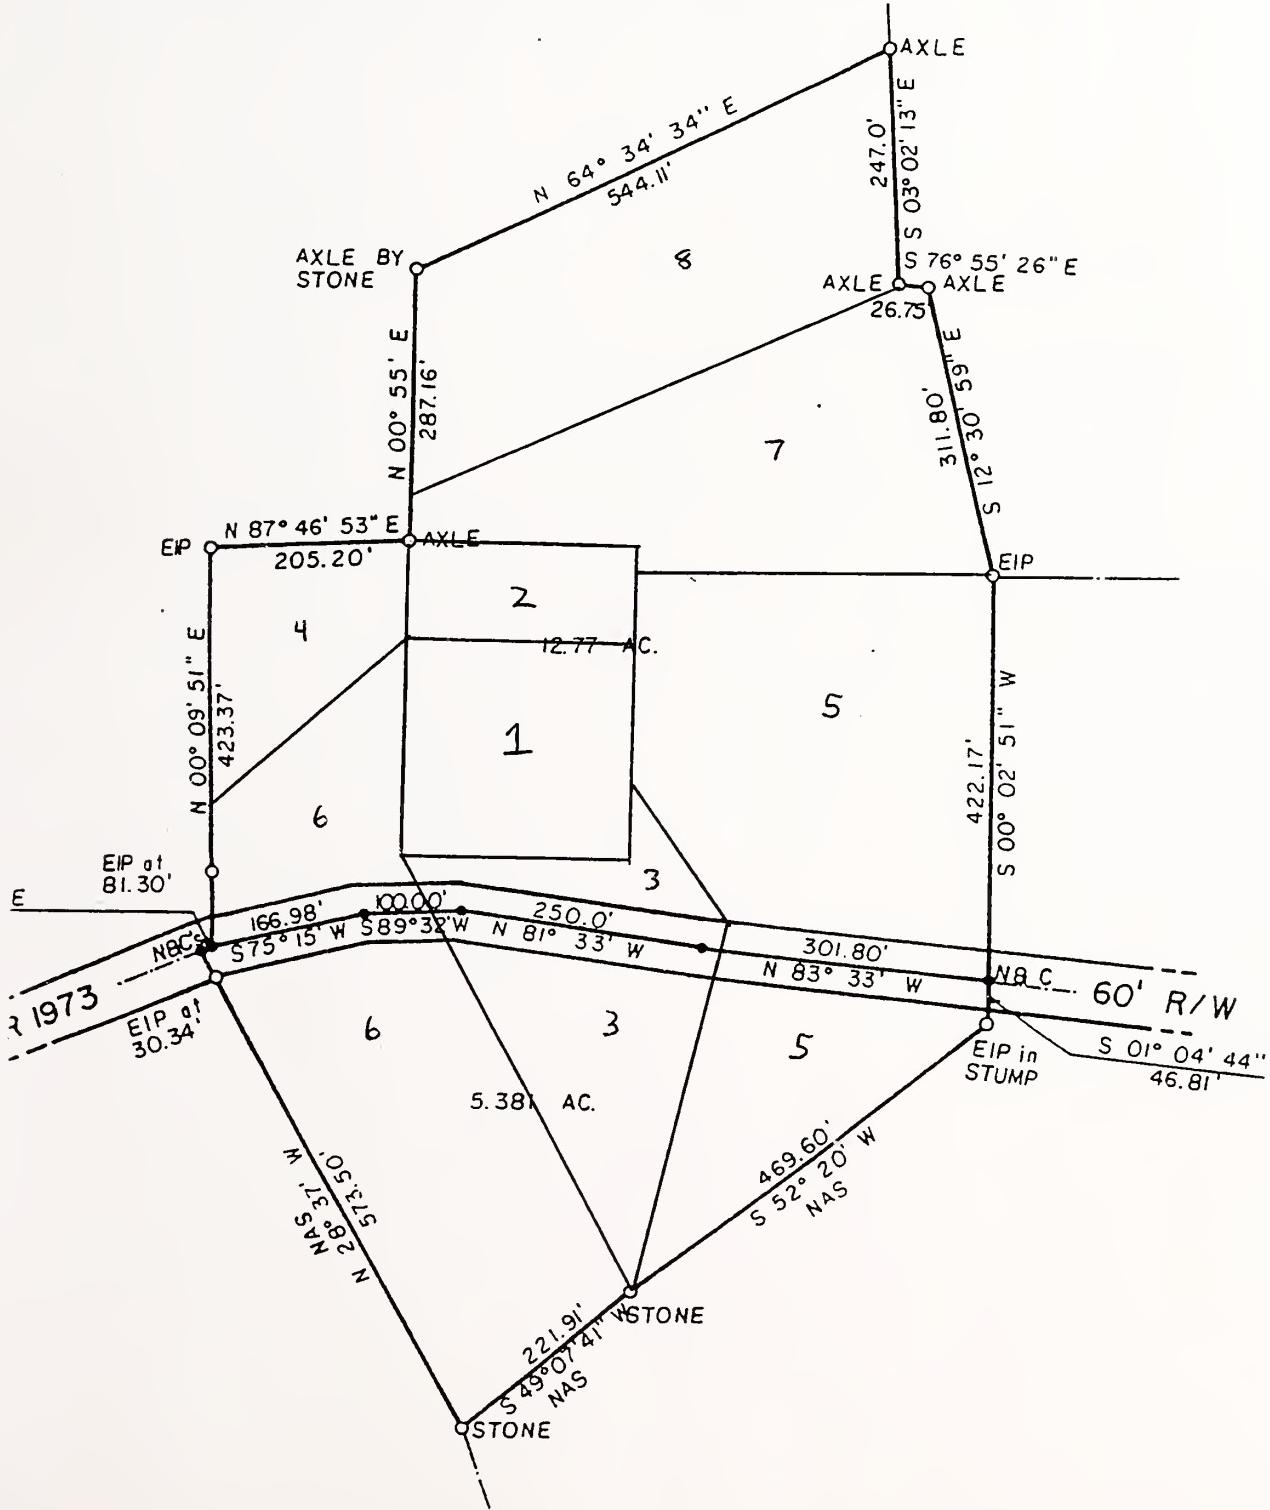

Notes are given exactly as they appear on the stone. Additional information is added in brackets [] and referenced. Reserved plots are indicated in bold. The absence of information on a supposedly filled plot is listed in bold, italics. underlined. Information given on a footstone is indicated. When a rock is used as a marker it is indicated. An unmarked stone indicates that a rock is fashioned, but not inscribed. Abbreviations for year/years includes: y. yr. yrs. ys.; abbreviations for month/months includes: m. mo. mos. ms.; abbreviations for day/days includes: d. dy. dys. ds.; other abbreviations are explained.

*All other additional historical and genealogical information is referenced.
Additional spaced lines may be used on the following line also.*
